

THE UTAH CATTLEMAN

The official publication of the Utah Cattlemen's Association

We live in a tumultuous time. It seems like a lot of folks are about as friendly as a rabid coyote to anyone who disagrees with them. There is very little dialogue or debate; there is more than enough hatred, anger, and attacks. Agriculture is not immune from the circling wolves.

I joined the Utah Cattlemen's Association because I felt adding our voices together as ranching families was desperately needed. For a moment, set aside the national issues and focus on Utah. Somehow, it's our fault the Great Salt Lake is shrinking. Apparently, five national parks are not enough. High beef prices? Our fault too. It's "essential" to subsidize a movie or a ski resort expansion, but looking out for food producers is called "government waste."

Utah's ranching industry is under fire. From aggressive zoning boards and wildlife management to the pressures of urbanization and estate taxes, the threats we face are relentless. We don't have the luxury of being divided. It is time to stop letting a few disagreements distract us from the bigger fight. We need every single person who cares about the survival of Utah beef to stand with us. If you care about protecting our way of life, come join us.

Our winter convention in Hurricane this past December was a success. Jeff Young has done a tremendous job as president, and we thank him for the immense time he invested in representing Utah ranchers. Our new president, Bryce Tolbert, will do a fabulous job. Joining me on the board are Jim Lamb, Russell Faatz, and Brent Gillman. We are here to serve you; please contact any of us with concerns, questions, or suggestions.

This country is fractured by huge divisions. City vs. rural, rich vs. poor, black vs. white. Perhaps the worst is red vs. blue. People lose friends, disown family, and despise neighbors over politics. It's tragic, and frankly, it's asinine. It is past time to remember that freedom allows for different opinions. I had a reminder of this recently out in the desert.

I saw him from a ways off. His windshield faced east, shining like a spotlight as it reflected the sun peeking over the mountains behind me. As I got closer, I saw a feller changing a tire. That happens a lot on our gravel roads. I slowed down and rolled down the passenger window.

The man watched me approach, looking relieved. The desert has stretches where very little traffic passes. I asked if he was okay. He replied that a piece of barbed wire had wrapped up behind his rear wheel. I offered to help, and we worked together to fix the problem.

Ten short minutes. Two opposite worlds. He wore a jacket with a logo of a company that actively works to end grazing on public lands. I wore a "Beef, It's What's For Dinner" cap. He drove a Subaru; I drove a 3/4-ton truck. His shoes were so new they actually squeaked; I wore old cowboy boots with a hole in the toe.

But we spent ten minutes fixing a problem together. I'll probably never see him again, but I bet he's glad I stopped. I know I am. It's how I was raised, and it's what more of us need to do: Stop, help, smile, visit, and get along.

We get maybe 80 years to live. Why spend them angry and offended? I've read very few obituaries that bragged about a political stance, but plenty that mention the kind of friend, neighbor, or "good human" a person was. That day was a wake-up call for me. I will smile more and frown less. I will work to repair instead of tear down. I will spend whatever time is left in my hourglass attempting to get along better. I hope you will too.

Bull Selection: Is Hybrid Vigor Alive and Well?

By Dr. David Secrist, PhD - Beef Extension Specialist Utah State University

Looking through the latest issue of The Utah Cattleman, I see multiple ads for bull sales across the state and region. We have many excellent seedstock producers in Utah. In my experience, three topics of conversation can become uncomfortable quickly: religion, politics, and beef breeds. I am not going to pick a fight with any of you on these topics. First, I am not an expert on any of them (though I do have opinions), and second, there is probably no single correct answer, at least when it comes to which breed is best.

Throughout my career, I have attempted to consistently apply science alongside sound business principles to make decisions. In 2023, the USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service published a report on value indicators for feeder cattle, examining factors that affect cattle value. Among the findings, they determined that black-hided cattle command a higher average price at auction. They also concluded that cattle sorted for size and color bring a premium. We all know that black is no longer exclusive to one breed. There are also credible reasons that you may want a cow that isn't black. However, uniform color and size command a premium, and black is preferred by many buyers at auction.

Beyond hide color, another genetic factor has been scientifically shown to add value. That factor is hybrid vigor or heterosis. Heterosis refers to the improvement demonstrated in many production traits for a crossbred animal relative to its straightbred parents. Heterosis tends to have its most significant effect on medium- to low-heritability traits. In other words, selecting bulls with impressive numbers on a lowly heritable trait may not make as much improvement as choosing a good quality bull from a breed that is different than your base cowherd. Low-heritability traits related to maternal ability and health respond strongly to heterosis. Heterosis can significantly improve even medium heritable growth traits, such as weaning weight and yearling weight.

Studies conducted at the Meat Animal Research Center (MARC) have identified improvements attributable to heterosis. For example, one can expect an improvement in the weaning weight of a crossbred calf of 3.8% relative to its straightbred parents. The greatest advantage comes from a crossbred cow bred to a bull of an unrelated breed. The calving rate increased by 3.7%. The cow's lifetime productivity has increased by over 25%, meaning that she will produce over 25% more weaned calf weight in her lifetime than her straightbred counterparts. Perhaps unintentionally, a commercial operation that uses only one breed year over year is producing a straightbred female with little or no heterosis.

Crossbreeding programs built to maximize heterosis can be challenging to implement, depending on your operation-specific logistics. However, the improvements are too significant to ignore. Advantages from a well-planned crossbreeding program can be achieved by harnessing the power Mother Nature provides free of charge.

The simplest program to execute for a ranch of any size is to purchase F1 cross heifers and breed them to a bull from a third breed. For example, an F1 Angus X Hereford cow could be bred to a Simmental bull. Those looking for more heat tolerance in their cow herd could find an F1 Santa Gertrudis X Red Angus female and breed her to a Charolais bull. (Please note that these are only examples, not intended to endorse any specific breed.)

Dr. Bob Weaber at Kansas State University has written an excellent article titled "Crossbreeding for Commercial Beef Production." In the article, he describes several rotational breeding programs that may apply to your operation. I urge you to read it. You can find it online or email me, and I will send it to you.

In summary, I will quote Dr. Weaber from the article, "If you implement a crossbreeding system, do not be fooled into the idea that you no longer need to select and purchase quality bulls or semen for your herd. Heterosis cannot overcome low-quality genetic inputs. The quality of progeny from a crossbreeding system is limited by the quality of the parent stock that produced them. Conversely, do not believe that the selection of extremely high-quality bulls or semen or choosing the right breed will offset the advantages of an effective crossbreeding system. Crossbreeding and sire selection are complementary and should be used in tandem to build an optimum mating system in commercial herds."

I wholeheartedly agree with Dr. Weaber's comment. Hopefully, this article will give you something to think about. I also hope that I haven't mashed anyone's toes too hard!

On a final note, the next seminar in the Western Ranch Management series will be held on February 18-19 in Logan. We will be taking a deep dive into Cow-Calf Business Management. As a bonus, on the morning of the 18th (before the regular session), we will cover some basics of cattle marketing. This is a follow-up from November's marketing meeting at the request of some participants. See page 16 for details and register online at wrma.usu.edu. See you there!

Happy bull shopping, and feel free to reach out anytime.

Utah Cattlewomen's Association

Over the past three years, I have learned so much through my involvement with the Utah Cattlewomen's Association (UCWA). I have had the privilege of working with the board as a registrar, and I am honored to now serve as your President-Elect. I have belonged to many organizations over the years, but this one is truly my favorite.

However, I have a dilemma. The ranches across Utah are home to amazing, incredible women who work tirelessly to make their operations the best they can be. My dilemma is this: How can we bring these amazing women in from their ranches to join us at the UCWA?

We have been honored this year to have the American National Cattlewomen's (ANCW) President be a Utah native. Nikki Weston works hard to balance her national assignments with her work on the ranch. Having watched her for years, I have felt her love and drive for our industry. Her example proves that it can be done. So, I am asking all of you, "If we can do it, will you do it with us?"

What exactly are we asking you to do? We want you to help make the Utah Cattlewomen's Association fuller and richer by sharing your thoughts, actions, and plans. Share the ranch goals and operation techniques that drive you to be better today than you were yesterday. Come and talk to us about what keeps you up at night, or about the new technologies you are trying or might want to try. We see new innovations being used by the women in this organization every day; for example, our current President, Michelle Merrill, is installing the first calving sheds in the Western U.S. for beef cows. She is excited about this adventure and wants to share the knowledge she is gaining with all of you.

Get involved with our events in 2026. During the coming year there will be opportunities.

- Farm field days take place throughout the year
- ANCW Region 6 Meeting (Hawaii): April 27th-29th
- Summer Meeting: June 17-18
- State Beef Cook-Off (Utah State Fair): September 10-20
- Winter Convention (Hurricane, UT): December 2-4

Our Farm Field Days are designed for the youth of our state, and we offer a program for college students to become teachers and advocates at these events.

The Utah Beef Ambassador Program is a collegiate leadership initiative that builds knowledgeable advocates for our industry. Participants learn to represent beef producers through public speaking and consumer outreach at fairs and schools. In 2025, our ambassadors reached an estimated 2,500 youth, 500+ college students, and more than 300 adults.

Our Region 6 Meeting will be held in Waikoloa, Hawaii, this April. Registration is open on the ANCW website. It is a wonderful time to get to know women from across our region and learn how they operate their ranches on the Big Island. We will also be hosting a WIRED (Women in Ranching Education and Development) event. This is a hands-on day where we perfect our ranching skills and might even work a cow or two.

Summer Meeting (June 17-18) is a great way to interact with your board members. We will conduct our business meeting on the 17th, followed by an area tour on the 18th.

In September, the Beef Cook-Off at the Utah State Fair is your chance to show off your skills with some fun new upgrades planned for this year.

The Winter Convention in Hurricane may seem a long way off, but if your life is like mine, the year will disappear between calving, moving pairs to the range, and fall round up. Please plan now to join us in December.

Knowledge is power, and we are so excited about the year ahead. We hope you can make plans to attend any or all our 2026 events.

Jennifer Tolbert
UCWA President Elect

Fall and Holiday Digital Marketing Campaign

The Utah Beef Council recently wrapped up its fall & holiday digital marketing flight, which ran from October 13 through December 31, 2025. The primary goal of this campaign was to extend the “National Anthem” campaign to Utah consumers. The results from this campaign demonstrate a highly efficient, data-driven approach to protecting beef demand. The ability to use precision targeting resulted in a large advertising reach. By utilizing premium digital ads, the campaign achieved:

8.1 Million+ Total Impressions: Putting beef in front of Utahns over 8 million times.

1.9 Million+ Video Views: Consumers actively watching beef-centered content.

28.9K Total Clicks: Direct engagement with recipes and nutritional information.

To maximize the impact of checkoff dollars, we used a mix of video, search, and visual ads to meet consumers where they were browsing or connected online.

Connected TV (CTV) & Netflix
The 30-second “Smartwatch Ad” was viewed in full 312,907 times. It highlighted beef’s ten essential nutrients showing high-quality visuals of savory kabobs on the grill. These ads resulted in 1.2

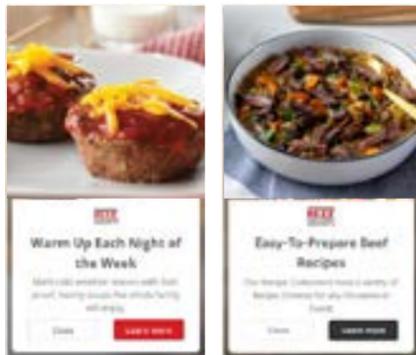

million impressions and ran on big screens during live NFL and college football games and popular Food Network programs. Because they are non-skippable, we saw a 97.3% completion rate (98.4% on Netflix specifically).

YouTube Strategy

We used Short-form (15-second) “How-To” recipe videos, including Slow Cooker Shredded Beef and Beef Enchilada Soup to catch attention of consumers. These ads resulted in 1.9 Million views and targeted consumers searching for dinner inspiration and cooking tutorials. By using shorter assets, we achieved a very efficient cost-per-view of just $0.028.

Google Display (Visual Ads)

These high-impact banner ads featured “Mini Meatloaves” and “Beef Stew” imagery with a “Learn More” button, which resulted in 4.8 million impressions. These ads “retargeted” consumers who had previously shown interest in beef, appearing on premium sites like ESPN, Fox News, and CNN to keep beef top-of-mind during their daily browsing.

Paid Search

Paid search are text-based ads that appear at the very top of Google

when users searched for terms like “best holiday beef roast” or “slow cooker beef recipes.” We saw a total of 133,000 searches. While the reach is smaller, the impact is much higher. We achieved an 11.08% click-through rate, meaning over 1 in 10 searchers clicked through to a beef recipe.

Our digital marketing campaigns represent a change in how we can reach the consumer when compared to traditional channels. These targeted digital spaces provide a great return on investment while providing us with verifiable metrics. Achieving nearly 2 million views for less than three cents per view allows your investment to work harder, ensuring that beef remains competitive against other proteins. Ultimately, this strategy protects your bottom line at the ranch by maintaining high demand at the lowest possible cost per consumer.

Join or Renew For a Chance to Win a Powder River C2000 Chute!

The Utah Cattlemen's Association (UCA) is a grassroots organization that has been working for you and your operation Since 1890. We look to our members for direction and support in the collective efforts of the industry. Your membership increases representation for when the association speaks on behalf of the cattle industry. UCA communicates with state and federal officers, leaders and agencies on your behalf.

When you join UCA, you are investing in advocacy & representation, networking with ranchers and industry professionals, and education. Your membership contributes to the development of policies that pave the way for the next generation of producers.

Powder River is a proud supporter of the UCA and is giving away a C2000 Chute at the 2026 UCA Winter Convention.

Simply renew your membership or sign up as a new member between now and December 1st, 2026. Every member is automatically entered, so join or renew today!
